[...]pieces, with the precious milk running in little streams all over the floor. That was the last straw! What was there left to be cooked for supper? The furious woman snatched a basket from a nail on the wall. She thrust it into Gretel s hand. Off with you both to the wood! she cried. And hurry up, too! Pick strawberries for supper! If the basket isn t full, you ll get a whipping. Yes, that s what you ll get. She shook her fist to make the admonition more impressive. Scarcely had they gone, however, when the woman, completely exhausted, sat down by the table and began to weep and moan. You see, she was really not an ill-natured woman at all. Poverty had embittered her, and the mere thought that her children might be starving, caused her to lose entire control of her feelings. It had been a long, wearisome, and disappointing day, and now, even at its end, her own irritability had caused another calamity. Angry with herself, the world, and everything, she rested...
