Reviews

This publication will be worth purchasing. It really is written in simple terms instead of difficult to understand. It has been designed in an exceptionally simple way and is particularly only right after I finished reading this ebook in which basically modified me, alter the way I believe.

Know, my nephew, that all domestic and wild animals are reared on milk, and the milk is derived from the juice of plants and the moisture in foods; the milk forms material for urine, water poured out upon the ground, and produces sap in the passage of the bladder. Having once formed this material, the aperture is no longer stopped up. Now, the bird does not have milk to begin its nurture, nor does its growth come from such things as have moisture, but from small stones or grain; and when the stone or produce comes at first into its interior, it closes up the place (01 cavity) of the water, and the moisture within it does not reach the closed place. By reason of the sap, the feather grows, and the sap enters into the growth of the feather. You will know and understand this by squeezing one of their feathers, for you will find moisture in the hole of the feather in which the feather grows, and the sap will issue forth as the feather grows. O, Uncle! Why have some birds stomachs, called gois, and others gizzards, called gesier? Understand, Nephew, that no birds reared from the earth have a stomach, for it would be of no use to them, but they have a gizzard, which is stronger and harder than a stomach; for the gizzard is made to grind small every hard thing, being...
