Martlett, to be removed to Bartletts Corner; but bad luck prevented its arrival there. On its way, near Daniel Weeds lane, Mr. Joseph Boardman was accidentally killed while assisting in the removal. With a great deal of labor it was hauled opposite the late Joseph Merrills and there sold to Mr. Jonathan Ring, who took it down and re-built it near Rings bridge for his son George. It is now owned and occupied by Mr. Jonathan Ring, grandson of the first-named Jonathan King. At the November meeting the articles of amendment to the Constitution of Massachusetts, in relation to compulsory support of any particular sect of religion, came before the meeting and were adopted by a vote of one hundred and thirty-five yeas to two nays. Nov. 13th. This evening is remarkable for the great number of meteors which...
