CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 298 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.8in. The geometric impact of the 911 event blossoms beyond NYC, The Pentagon and the lonely fields of Pennsylvania. Parents, Wives, Husbands, Children, Siblings, Friends, Neighbors, and Workmates connect in an incredible linking of humanity. We are all in a sense victims, or more properly, we share in a small way, the suffering. We share this rip in the fiber of humanity. We share our human condition. There is anger, vengeance and perhaps in time forgiveness and peace. Sailors believe it is unlucky to change the name of a boat. Placebo was the fourth name. The sailboat Placebo was a 47-year old derelict when Michael Collins discovered her and brought her back to life. In many ways, Placebo would repay the favor in similar fashion. The Baltimore Catechism offers that the sacrament of Extreme Unction more commonly referred to as the Last Rites (the Placebian rites) are given to someone in immediate danger of death. It adds the remark, Giving comfort and solace to the soul and sometimes to the body. The medical use of the definition, Placebo, is derived from the healing effects of personal solace. The sugar pill is a venue to seduce the body into relief. The healing comes from within. Nothing in Michael Collins experience had prepared him for his life became after September 11, 2001. His wife, Linda and daughter, Beth were visiting New York City to celebrate her Sweet 16 birthday. Like almost 3, 000 others they were guilty of nothing more than being in the wrong place at the wrong time, they were never found. Michael's world is rearranged and disorienting. His sense of loss immediately flowers to guilt. The pain...
